Slim's Story

It all started simple enough. Three guys—Ryan Hodson, Greg Smart and Tom Gordon—realized that there wasn't a restaurant where they could eat a quick meal that actually served fresh chicken.

They were tired of the big chains and local restaurants serving frozen chicken and trying to pass it off as "fresh tasting." Notice the word "tasting." Tom, Greg and Ryan did...in fact they noticed it everywhere. Restaurants couldn't say their chicken was fresh because it wasn't.

They believed the concept was great, but at that point it was just a dream. They had little restaurant experience, no recipes, but they had a belief in their ability to realize their dream.

The next step was to develop Slim Chicken's unique recipes. They spent countless hours in Greg's garage cooking chicken and making their dipping sauces. They invited everyone they knew to taste the food and sauces they created. The recipes they came up with at those "tasting parties" are the same that you order today.

With their commitment to serving quality food and offering excellent customer service, they knew the three of them could make it a success. That is exactly how it worked. Sometimes being inexperienced is an entrepreneur's greatest asset.

They opened their first Slim Chicken's in Fayetteville in February of 2003. The first several years consisted of the three guys working in that location day and night. They spent that time listening to their customers, modifying their menu, and teaching their employees the "Slim Chicken's Difference."

With little money to spend, they had to rely on word-of-mouth advertising to grow their business. They were amazed by the amount of repeat customers and the frequency those customers ate at Slim's—four or five times a week was not rare! Obviously, all of the time they spent in Greg's garage paid off with a menu and food that people loved.

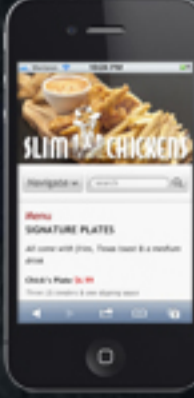

Their homemade signature sauces, hand-breaded chicken tenders, and fresh Buffalo wings have created such a demand that they've grown well beyond the little restaurant they created. It all started because three guys wanted a place where they could eat some fresh chicken...
