

About Horn Canna Farm

Hello! We are Dustin and Nikki Snow. We live and work with our five children on our fourth generation farm. Our family has been growing and selling cannas since 1928. We sell large, three to five eye rhizomes, the largest you will find anywhere! Every order is filled by hand just like Grandpa Horn did years ago. We love what we do and even more, we love hearing from our customers and friends on how cannas have brightened their own corner of the world. Each of us at Horn Canna Farm is committed to making your experience with us the very best it can be. It is truly our pleasure to be of service to you!

Landscaping with Cannas

Not only are cannas EASY to plant and EASY to grow, cannas love full sunlight. They are extremely versatile, providing a burst of color as an accent or planted in a mass of head turning color. Cannas add charm when planted amid grasses, trailing flowers, elephant ears, contrasting annuals and perennials, flowering trees and shrubs of all shapes and sizes. Or plant cannas in rows or borders for a more tailored look. Whether your flowerbeds are flowy and free forming or precisely planned and formal, cannas are an excellent choice to brighten any sunny spot.

Blooms: Cannas are the best at providing bold color throughout the summer. They are top notch for creating magnificent curb appeal even on the hottest summer days. Cannas bloom in large clusters. As blooms wither, new buds are already forming within the stalk. This allows the plants to be in continuous bloom from July until frost. Cannas bloom in colors of red, yellow, pink and orange.

Foliage: Cannas make a big statement with their lush, tropical foliage. Foliage color varies from several hues of green to shades of purple, red, bronze and chocolate. To add even more intrigue we offer three varieties with variegated foliage. Some of our giant cannas produce extremely large, wide banana-like leaves, creating dramatic vertical interest in your flowerbeds.

Planting: Cannas are best planted in the spring after danger from frost. Ideally cannas are planted when soil temperatures are around 60 degrees. Best results are achieved when planted in loose, fertile and well-draining soil. Amend the soil, if necessary, with composted organic matter. Plant in a sunny location that receives a minimum of four hours of direct sunlight. Full sun is great! Plant the rhizomes 12 to 18 inches apart. Lay the long part

Our Guarantee
As always, we guarantee all bulbs to be healthy, of excellent quality and true to name. Orders are quality checked at the time of shipment. If bulbs decline during shipment, please notify us immediately. We will gladly remedy the problem.

rows or borders. Whether creating a flowy, free-forming flowerbed or one that is more formal and precisely planned, cannas are an excellent choice to brighten and fill any sunny spot.

Cannas also bloom generously in containers, making them a great option for porches, decks and sunny apartment balconies. Cannas can even add a bold, tropical flair to water gardens. Multi-hued blooms from July to frost are easy to have just about anywhere with carefree cannas!

A free planting guide is included with each order. If you are interested in large quantities, visit the 'Available in Bulk' page of our website or give us a call.

A big welcome to our newest giant variety, Grande! It is one of the varieties that is often referred to as a banana canna. We hope you love its big, wavy foliage that grows over six feet tall all in one season. In addition, we are tickled to offer petite Dawn Pink for 2019 after being absent from our availability for several years. And don't miss our newest Hummingbird Collection, packed with popular red blooming cannas, sure to attract lovely guests into your garden.

As always, we guarantee all varieties are true to name. Order as early as possible as some of our varieties sell out quickly each season.

If we have had the privilege of serving you in the past, thank you! If you have not ordered from us, we hope you will give us a try. We are more than happy to answer questions or offer suggestions. We really enjoy talking with our customers so when you call, we're usually the ones answering! We look forward to serving you this coming spring!

Kindest regards,
Dustin & Nikki Snow
